Call for Proposals: Studies in Christianity in East Asia
Lehigh University Press

Lehigh University Press has reformulated its long-running series, Studies in Christianity in China, as Studies in Christianity in East Asia. This change reflects the evolving nature of scholarship on transnational Christianity, and represents LUP's commitment to support and help advance scholarship on the history and cultures of Christianity in East Asia.

In coordination with this change in scope, Lehigh University Press is pleased to announce a call for proposals for book manuscripts. We are particularly interested in monographs that investigate Christianity in trans-Asian perspective, books that help us better understand the complexities of Christian identities in East Asia, and works that interrogate the historical, social, and cultural trajectories of Christian missions and indigeneity. Lehigh University Press also encourages proposals for edited primary source materials and edited scholarly collections.

For nearly 40 years, Lehigh University Press has remained committed to the advancement of humanities and social sciences research. We are a small, independent, university press that works closely with our authors to publish original, meaningful, and important books that contribute to our understanding of our world. We especially encourage submissions from early career scholars and from authors and voices that are underrepresented in their fields and the academy.

Inquiries may be made to LUP's managing editor, Nathan Carpenter: nrc313@lehigh.edu.
Submission guidelines and additional press information can be found on LUP's website:
